

September 1999

A Case of Danger

Margot Kelley Rodriquez

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarship.law.berkeley.edu/bglj>

Recommended Citation

Margot Kelley Rodriquez, A Case of Danger, 14 BERKELEY WOMEN'S L.J. 1 (1999).

Link to publisher version (DOI)

<http://dx.doi.org/https://doi.org/10.15779/Z38Z60C16G>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Law Journals and Related Materials at Berkeley Law Scholarship Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in Berkeley Journal of Gender, Law & Justice by an authorized administrator of Berkeley Law Scholarship Repository. For more information, please contact jcera@law.berkeley.edu.

Commentary

Poetry for the People

Poetry for the People is a program at U.C. Berkeley designed to promote political and artistic empowerment of students. Under the direction of June Jordan, students learn the art of truth telling. They learn that telling the truth is a necessary and healthy way to create powerful and positive connections among people. Poetry for the People has developed community programs at Berkeley High School, Mission Cultural Center, FCI Dublin Federal Women's Prison, and most recently Yerba Buena Center for the Arts. The following are submissions from student teacher poets.

A Case of Danger

Margot Kelley Rodriguez†

I forgot you like me proper in my place against the wall like some kind of trophy you brag about to your friends a real live mixed-blood on display
I slam my door shut when your friend defends the eight cops down the street with their guns drawn and pointed at the brother in his car who knows if he moves he might not see his wife again and my anger becomes an eye-rolling affair excused as my bad attitude "she gets that way sometimes"

Copyright © 1998, Margot Kelley Rodriguez. For electronic use permission, contact the BERKELEY WOMEN'S LAW JOURNAL.

† Margot Kelley Rodriguez is a student teacher poet with Poetry for the People. She recently self-published her first collection, angels en la arena: angels in the sand: revolutionary poems.

you groan when I insist we cross the street to watch make sure the cops dont crack dont slam dont shoot the man to the ground you call me stupid but you don't know cops and you don't know bullets and you don't know that an audience of college girls can save lives you rather hide in the house where you assume the guise of expert on racial affairs quoting people who wrote about 60th and Market about where I grew up telling me what happened to me

I forgot you like me proper to intimidate your friends yeah a real mixed-blood but you only like my music if you know the song by heart you only like my words if you think of them first and you only like my people from a distance across the street in a car about to explode.

The Executive Order 9066

Margot Kelley Rodriguez

you hide behind words like incarceration deportation to soften the blow of the baton to muffle the screams of those damn (fill in the blank) foreigners you race to wipe out the next subversive terrorist with sticks and kicks you break the bones of those ghetto kids in the name of some twisted form of neo-nazi justice and anyone who doesn't come in the right pre-packaged all-star container needs to "go back where they came from" or at least get out of sight right?

Behind the wall of wire Behind the media hype of alien delinquent predator spy a young girl clings to her mother's dress imprisoned by the fold of her eye

dinner party

María Poblet†

my mother watches waiters doesn't notice the sequined women sitting beside her until one of them leans over laughter and champagne spill fresh on her lips, she asks what about your family dear my mother sells tupperware from door to door she answers my father cuts cows into steaks the ladies stop laughing my mother sits up straight clears her throat

Ghafflah*

María Poblet†

on the way to recess Lisette reaches up and tugs my sleeve teacher, my mom says I look like Selena don'tcha think?
 with narrow eyes she stares at Maricela sideways and up and down pulls out her pink plastic mirror teases her thick black hair and looks to me for approval

Maricela shoves her aside with the full force of her nine year old body what about me? she demands holding a bootleg tape of Selena's last album next to her left cheek eyes wide with question

Copyright © 1998, María Poblet. For electronic use permission, contact the BERKELEY WOMEN'S LAW JOURNAL.

† María Poblet serves as Artistic Director of Poetry for the People Bay Area.

* In Islam, Ghafflah is the sin of forgetting one's divine origins.

I try to invent a second star some way to split the compliment to even out their fight but I can't.

and in the peeling gray hallway of Eastman Elementary neither can they.

Haiku

Yunjong Suh†

Husband sets a plate
For the first time for his wife Just after she dies

Copyright © 1998, Yunjong Suh. For electronic use permission, contact the BERKELEY WOMEN'S LAW JOURNAL.

† Yunjong Suh graduated from U.C. Berkeley in 1998 with a degree in Psychology, and now works with Poetry for the People Collective. She commits to bridging communities, particularly ethnic and racial communities, with the hope of contributing to a truly democratic multicultural society.